Weekly World News fan paints tiny front pages — on the heads of pins!

TINY pins like the one shown left sport hand-painted Weekly World News front pages on their heads.

By JOE BERGER

Staff writer

Remarkable artist Avery Austin is so wild about Weekly World News that he paints dazzling recreations of his favorite front pages — on the heads of tiny straight pins!

The wondrous works of art measure a measly 3/50ths of an inch across — and are painted with a brush containing a single strand of antelope hair.

"You need a steady hand and good eyes when you work that small, but you save a lot of money on paints," laughed amazing Avery, 35. "I figure I could work day and night for the rest of my life and never use up a palette of paints — and I bet I'm the only painter in the country who can say that." The Georgia jeweler began cranking out his mini-masterpieces two years ago after reading about a guy from Guadalajara, Mexico, who paints flowers on the head of a pin.

ENLARGED pinhead.

PENCIL dwarfs tiny pinhead masterpiece featuring a Weekly World News cover!

"I'd always dabbled with paints as a hobby, and the idea of painting on a pinhead appealed to me as kind of a challenge," creative Avery told reporters.

"So I started out painting landscapes, things like that, and I did some nice ones, too. But after a while it got kind of boring.

"Then last year I caught on to Weekly World News, started buying it every week at the store, and decided to see if I could do their front pages on the head of a pin. That way I'd have something new and exciting to paint every week. Nothing boring there, that's for sure."

Since then, the Atlanta bachelor has painted nine peewee covers and is currently toiling on his 10th — the July 21 edition featuring a farmer with a 6-foot butterfly he bagged in Arkansas. "That's been a challenge, doing that butterfly on the head of a pin," said sharp-eyed Avery. "But my favorite is still the bat boy cover. Those eyes, man — they're an artist's delight.

"And thanks to Weekly World News, I know I won't ever run out

NO KIDDING!

This 38-year-old beauty is a GREAT-GRANDMA!

GREAT-GRANNY Sharon Conicelli hopes her great-granddaughter will earn her a spot in Guinness Book of World Records.

By BEATRICE DEXTER
Correspondent

Sexy Sharon Conicelli is a stunning beauty at 38 and no one would ever guess her shocking secret: The knock-your-socks-off secretary is a great-grandmom!

Blonde Sharon gave birth to daughter Ann when she was 12. At the age of 14, Ann had a daughter Susan. And now Susan is a proud mother, too — at the age of 12.

"I tell people I'm a great-grandmom and everyone thinks I'm joking," says Sharon, a divorcee from Birmingham, Ala., who has four sons and two daughters and 32 grandkids.

"But it's something I'm very proud of. Experts have told me they have never heard of anyone who was a great-grandmother at such a young age and that I ought to be in the Guinness Book of World Records."

The gorgeous great-grandmom says having babies at a young age is common in her family. Her sisters all married before the age of 15 and so did her daughters Ann and Marylou. Young Susan had her baby out of wedlock, but she's very much in love with her little girl's 19-year-old father and plans to marry as soon as Susan is 16.

FOUR GENERATIONS: Sharon with daughter Ann, right, granddaughter Susan and baby Tammy.

"The Conicelli women are good mothers and they like to have their children very young. That way the babies are healthy and we've got the energy of youth to help us keep up with them. Some people might think it's strange to be a grandmother at my age, but I'm glad I got my child bearing over early. Now, as a great-grandmom, I can sit back and enjoy my descendants — and still have plenty of life left in me for traveling, working and having fun."

Sharon says she loves babysitting for her great-granddaughter Tammy when she's not working, attending aerobics classes or traveling.

And she enjoys family get-togethers with her six kids, grandchild. What's more, if Tammy marries young like most kids in the family do, Sharon expects she could be a great-great-grandmom before she hits 60.

"I think it will be a gas to be a great-great-grandmother at an age when most people are having their first grandchild," Sharon says.

"And I figure that by the time I die there will be at least one great-great-great-grandchild to keep me com-

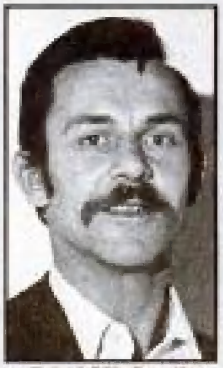
Greased con slips through a window — EXACTLY THIS SIZE!



AT LARGE! Gus Kafatos slipped away from the maximum security prison in Athens, Greece.

By DALE MAYES
Special correspondent

A slippery prison inmate saved margarine from his dinner trays, covered his body with the greasy stuff and squeezed his way to freedom — through a tiny window just ten inches high and six and three-quarter inches wide!

Astonished officials said the amazing escape was the first ever from the maximum security prison in Athens, Greece.

"We still can't believe it happened," said one prison boss. "You just can't imagine a grown man getting through that window. And this wasn't a small man. He's six feet tall and weighs at least 150 pounds. He must have wanted out real bad."

Authorities said crafty con Gus Kafatos, 43, saved up slabs of margarine for a week. Then he smashed the cell window glass — which prison officials had said was unbreakable — undressed, greased his body and slipped through the tiny opening to freedom.

At last report, the elusive crook was still at large.

Woman cashed dead dad's paychecks for 24 years!

Loving daughter Jeanne Lawson banked her crippled father's retirement checks every month — even though he had been dead for 24 years!

The conniving old woman bilked the U.S. Railroad Retirement Board out of $123,600 before being arrested at her Atlanta, Ga., home.

Mrs. Lawson, 75, pleaded guilty to bank fraud and faces up to 30 years in prison. A sentencing date was not set.

She admitted changing her father's address to make it appear he was still alive. At least twice the angry oldster told the board her dad was alive but wasn't receiving his checks.

The greedy widow's father, Edmond Maclean, died in August 1967 at age 80, but investigators didn't discover he was dead until they conducted a review in 1991 of all retirees over 100.

Holding hands is hazardous to your health!

A doctor now warns that holding hands with your sweetie can be hazardous to your health — it's an excellent way to catch a cold!

"Cold viruses are most often spread from the hands of someone who has a cold to someone who is well," declared Dr. J.O. Hendley, who is considered a cold expert.

He said the well person actually infects his or herself by rubbing the eyes or nose.

Murphy the frog wolfs down a frozen dinner

What does a growing African bullfrog eat for lunch? Just about anything he wants, that's what! Here 7-pound Murphy the Mouth pigs out on his favorite meal — a fresh frozen dinner rat served up by his caretaker at the University of Florida in Gainesville. Murphy is still a growing boy and he loves to eat. African bullfrogs can live for more than 20 years and can, fully grown, weigh in at a scale-crunching 20 pounds. Murphy should have no trouble setting a new weight record the way he eats.

MAN FINDS REAL POT OF GOLD AT END OF RAINBOW!

LUCKY carpenter Dick Maddox is now a rich man.

By DACK KENNEDY / Special correspondent

Lucky Dick Maddox found the end of a rainbow in a field west of Baton Rouge and to the carpenter's amazement, the colors touched ground beside a big black pot of gold!

"I know it sounds like a fairy tale but I've got $320,000 sitting in my bank account to prove it," said Maddox, 56. "Don't ask me to explain it.

"I just know that I found a pot of gold and I'll never have to work again."

Precious ingots are worth a whopping $320,000!

The mind-twisting drama reportedly unfolded after a fierce morning thunderstorm in August.

Maddox said he was leaving his house for work but the rain was so heavy that he decided to wait for the storm to pass.

When the rain stopped, he spotted a brilliant rainbow that, in his words, "looked close enough to touch."

"I was already late for work, but something told me to take a closer look, and I started walking through the field behind my house," he continued.

"To my surprise, the rainbow ended beside a cast iron pot.

"When I looked inside I almost had a heart attack. All I could see was gold ingots."

Maddox said he immediately decided to take the day off and carted the ingots back to his house. Then he took five of them to a jeweler for analysis and found out that they were pure.

"I called the police and told them about the gold and they said I could keep it if nobody put in a claim," he said. "A few weeks later I got a call from a cop who said: 'Mr. Maddox, you're a rich man.'

"I had already contacted a broker who agreed to buy my gold for $320 an ounce. I had 1,000 ounces in the pot. That's $320,000 in my bank account."

Astonishingly enough, Maddox's luck in finding gold at the end of a rainbow is not without precedent.

German myth expert Dieter Wolff has documented 11 other instances of people finding similar windfalls in the vicinity of rainbows in the past 10 years alone.

"We've never found a suitable explanation," the expert said.

Operation to fix flat feet kills teen!

Pretty Catherine Clement loved to dance so much that she underwent surgery to correct her flat feet — and died of complications. Pathologists in Paris, France, said the 14-year-old girl died after blood clots formed under her casts and worked their way into her lungs.

Jeffery Dahmer copycat!

Man bites off girlfriend's lip — and spits it out on sidewalk

An angry boyfriend tore a page out of the grisly life of sicko cannibal Jeffrey Dahmer — and punched his lover in the stomach, bit her lip off and spit it on the sidewalk.

And while Margaret Stinson is having reconstructive surgery on her lower lip, weirdo Stevie Robertson is serving time in the same prison as Dahmer, the serial killer who tortured, butchered and ate his victims.

By JACK ALEXANDER
Staff writer

Milwaukee Judge Jeffrey Wagner called Robertson's actions sheer madness and sentenced him to five years in prison for aggravated battery.

"I'm not convinced, based on the defendant's history . . . that he's not a potential threat to any woman he may come in contact with," Wagner said.

"No person deserves to be treated like that."

Robertson's latest run-in with the law resulted from a drunken argument he had with Miss Stinson as they walked across a parking lot.

After punching her in the stomach, Robertson, 34, grabbed both sides of her head and said, "I'm going to do a Jeffrey Dahmer trick." Then he bit off her lower lip.

It wasn't the first time the vicious punk had taken his drunken rage out on a woman.

In 1990, he bopped Miss Stinson on the head with a full, 40-ounce beer bottle and rifled her pockets after she fell to the ground. He was on probation for that attack when he bit off her lip.

In 1989, Robertson was acquitted in the stabbing death of his sister's boyfriend, Victor Hamilton, 32. A jury believed it was self-defense.

Assistant District Attorney Gerald Faulk said Robertson has a long history of abuse toward Miss Stinson.

"He likes to knock her around when he gets drunk. When he gets in trouble for his actions, he blames it on the booze, other people or both," Faulk said.

Cab driver memorizes entire dictionary!

Georgia man learns a whopping 155,592 words — by heart!

By TANYA BRODER
Correspondent

Amazing Henry Kipling never has to look up words in the dictionary because he's memorized the entire book, page by page — spellings, definitions and all!

The 46-year-old cab driver from Atlanta, Ga., spent over five years committing all 155,592 words listed in the big book to memory. Now he can call up any word you mention at the drop of a hat.

"It's nothing all that special — it was just something to do," the bashful bachelor says modestly.

"I had plenty of spare time and this was a way to fill up my evenings.

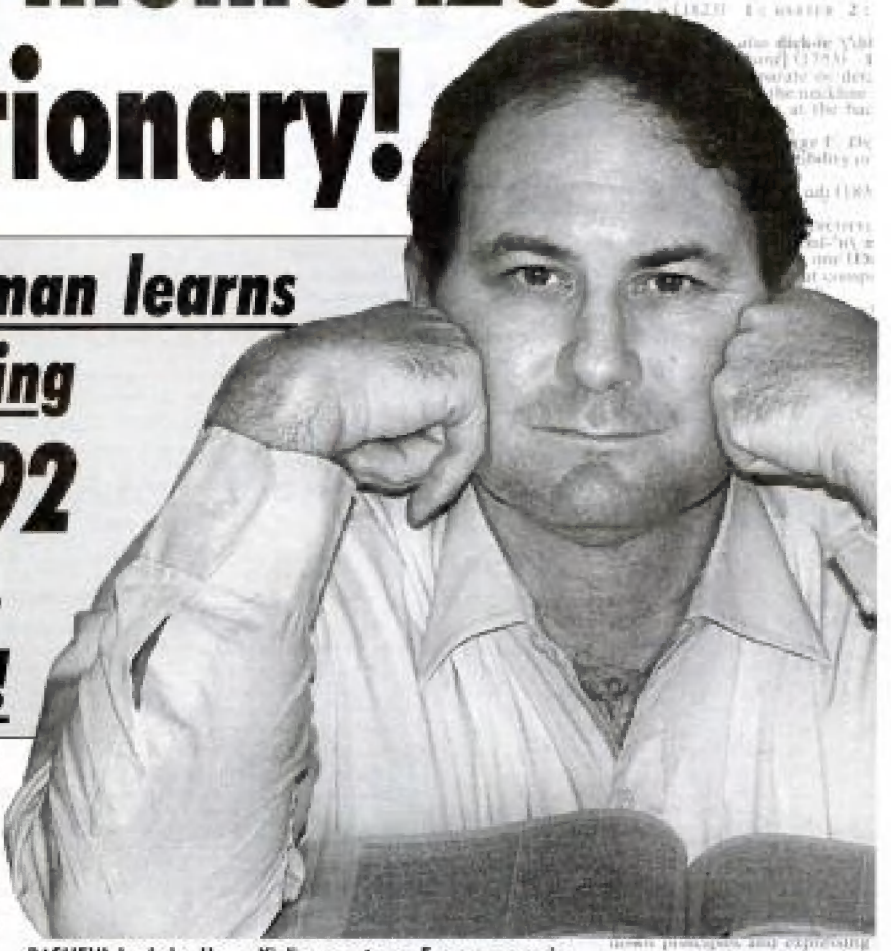
"At first it was slow going. I did about twelve words a night. But after a few years I got up to a page every night. I memorized the words, the geographical and biographical names and even the colleges and universities.

"I can tell you everything about any word you name, if it's in Webster's New Collegiate Dictionary."

Kipling started his bizarre memory exercise in 1987, shortly after he broke up with his girlfriend. Lonely and bored, the bachelor was leafing through his dictionary one night when it occurred to him that he could learn a lot by committing it to memory.

That night he began his marathon chore, storing away words like aardvark and abaft, including their spelling, pronunciation, meanings, synonyms and antonyms.

"After a few nights, I got so I was looking forward to getting home and picking up the dictionary," Henry says. "I realized I was having a lot of fun and getting smarter, too. Within a few months I was wowing my passengers with my big vocabulary. I found I could talk about an incredible variety of subjects. I was really enjoying this chance to show off."



BASHFUL bachelor Henry Kipling spent over 5 years memorizing all 1,564 pages of Webster's New Collegiate Dictionary.

The most astonishing demonstration Henry ever gave of his memory feat was one day last July when he rattled off 634 pages at random at an Elks Club picnic. His performance led to an article in a local paper and an appearance on television — and convinced Henry that he should try to expand his accomplishments.

So two weeks ago, the amazing man took up a new challenge: He's going to memorize a complete set of Encyclopaedia Britannica, word for word.

"I figure that will keep me busy for a long time to come,"

Gotcha! Clever nurses trap escaped con in car trunk and drive to police station

Two nurses convinced prison escapee Donald Watts to hop into the trunk of their car so they could drive him to safety, cops say — and when he did they drove the stupid con straight to the police department!

The 18-year-old jailbird was ordered held without bond on 21 charges by grateful authorities. They credited Leanne Bowman and Caitlin Conroy, both 22, with quick thinking.

The young Brisbane, Australia, women said Watts broke into the house they shared and told them he was desperate to escape the police cordon thrown up in the area following his escape. The clever nurses offered to put him in the trunk of their car and drive him out of their suburb.

"He said, 'Good idea,'" Leanne said. "I

"$60,000.00!! All at once!!"

Now HANUSSEN is planning a wonderful new life for you, too!

I JUST RECEIVED a letter from Dorothea Mays. She even won more than $60,000.00! She writes:

Although not everyone will have the same experience, we have received numerous similar reports.

Why, of all people, was it Dorothea Mays who won all of that money?

As she writes herself, she trusted my teachings about a happy life.

This path is now also open to you, because if you want me to, I will reveal your future to you for the next 6 months!

I will also tell you your very personal lucky numbers which you can even play in the lottery (of course, only where legally permissible)!

In this way I have already made many people happy:

● A machinist won $1.15 million with my lucky numbers ● A policeman's widow received $360,000 ● I helped a housewife get $200,000....

(All of these winnings have been documented by the European press)

Now I also want to make you happier... carefree... superior!

Why you?

No, you certainly didn't have it easy in the last years.

● All those worries! ● All that grief! ● All those intrigues against you!

And you only wanted to do what is best for others. But when... WHEN is kindness ever rewarded?

Today it is!

I will absorb myself in your fate.

And I will plan a totally new and most wonderful life for you!

Just as I have helped thousands before you.

Yes, I have already made thousands of them happy before you!

● Rich! ● Free from cares! ● Totally happy!

TODAY IT IS YOUR TURN!

Today you will finally find out whether tomorrow you will ● find a new partner for your life ● get a new (high paying) job ● be more successful than the others.

What is awaiting you in the next six months as far as your health is concerned? When should you be especially on your guard? Of whom? Will you win the impending lawsuits? Will you conclude your negotiations successfully? How will your disagreement end with your children / parents / relatives?

There are a thousand questions which are now finally answered for you. Clearly and plainly.

With this, your life, too, has entered a decisive phase because I will predict your future most precisely. In all of its details.

I will even send you exact monthly plans. In them, I will show you what to expect in the next six months... and what you should do... day by day... week by week...

I will even send you a chart which shows you precisely WHICH LUCKY NUMBERS TO PLAY IN THE LOTTERY AT WHAT TIME.

My analysis for you consists of 15 full pages. With it, you can truly make a new life for yourself.

Now you have a chance to do just that. In this way I want to help you make your life a happy one.

Only $2.00 for postage and handling!

The others (who have been better off for a long time) also only did the RIGHT thing at the RIGHT time – JUST AS I WILL PRESCRIBE FOR YOU IN THE NEXT 6 MONTHS. Contact me.

I am waiting for you,

Your Hanussen

BREAST IMPLANTS MADE MY BOOBS GLOW IN THE DARK!

SEATTLE, Wash. — Suffering secretary Anita Rose Evert says her breast implants have ruined her life — because two years after they were put in, her breasts began glowing like headlights and they're still glowing, even though the implants have been removed!

The 57-year-old divorcee has consulted dozens of specialists about her problem, but no one can explain what causes it.

Meanwhile, she's planning to sue the surgeon who did her breast job for the humiliation and suffering she has experienced.

"It used to be that you could only tell they glowed at night, when I took my clothes off," said the frustrated Seattle resident.

"Then it got so you could see them through my clothes. Now they're so bright they shine like headlights even in the daytime.

"My friends avoid me because they're embarrassed. Strangers stare and sometimes they make comments or point and laugh.

"I've grown afraid to go out in public because I feel like a sideshow freak."

Mrs. Evert says she got her implants in 1986 right after she divorced her husband of 13 years.

At first she was very pleased with them, she says, and noticed nothing peculiar about them.

The silicone inserts were natural looking and comfortable and gave a boost to her ego, she recalls, and friends complimented her on her looks.

"Then one night I was preparing to take a shower and I noticed that my breasts were giving off a kind of greenish light," Mrs. Evert said. "They felt fine, but they looked awful. And every night after that they got brighter and brighter. I was scared."

By TANYA BRODER
Correspondent

Mrs. Evert says she went to her plastic surgeon and had him remove the implants, but the greenish glow remained and got stronger.

The frightened woman consulted physician after physician about the weird light emanating from her bosom. But despite scores of tests and conferences with experts on silicone implants, she is nowhere near knowing what to do about it.

"The scientists tell me there was some sort of chemical reaction in my body caused by the implants and that this reaction is ongoing," says the frustrated mother of two.

"They have taken tissue samples and they're studying ways to help me, but they admit that right now they don't know what to do.

"Meanwhile, it's getting hard for me to go anywhere — even to work — when I have to confront all the stares and cruel jokes. If I don't get better soon, believe me someone's going to pay for the misery this has caused me."

DOCTORS can't explain why Anita Evert's breasts glow. "You can even see them through my clothes," she says.

FRANK SINATRA TUNES USED TO TORTURE TEENS!

Start spreading the news — a teacher in Chicago is doing it his way — he's started a Frank Sinatra Detention Club to make staying after school a punishment worse than death for disruptive teens.

Bruce Janu disciplines unruly students at Riverside Brookfield High by zapping them with everything from Chicago to New York, New York to Bad, Bad Leroy Brown.

"The kids just hate it," says Janu, who calls himself a fan of Frank's. Most of the big beats are rap and heavy metal fans, so the whole point of the club is to make more fun for the teacher and a little bit of hell for the troublemakers. "They're miserable," says Janu. I'll bet the Chairman of the Board isn't feeling too good, either.

A USA TODAY columnist took the opportunity to rub salt in the skinny singer's wounds. "Whether we should be force-feeding students the works of a woman-hating, foul-mouthed singer often seen hanging out with nefarious members of the underworld is another matter," sniffed scribe Joe Urschel.

"I can imagine those poor teens in Chicago wandering the halls with the incessant chant of 'Cause he had, high hopes/ He had, high hopes/ He had — high, apple pie, in the sky hopes!' looping through their consciousness." The scooby-doo-detention was still going on when the Weekly World News went to press.

Dolly's treasure chest is a frequent front page filler for the tabloids — and she knows why.

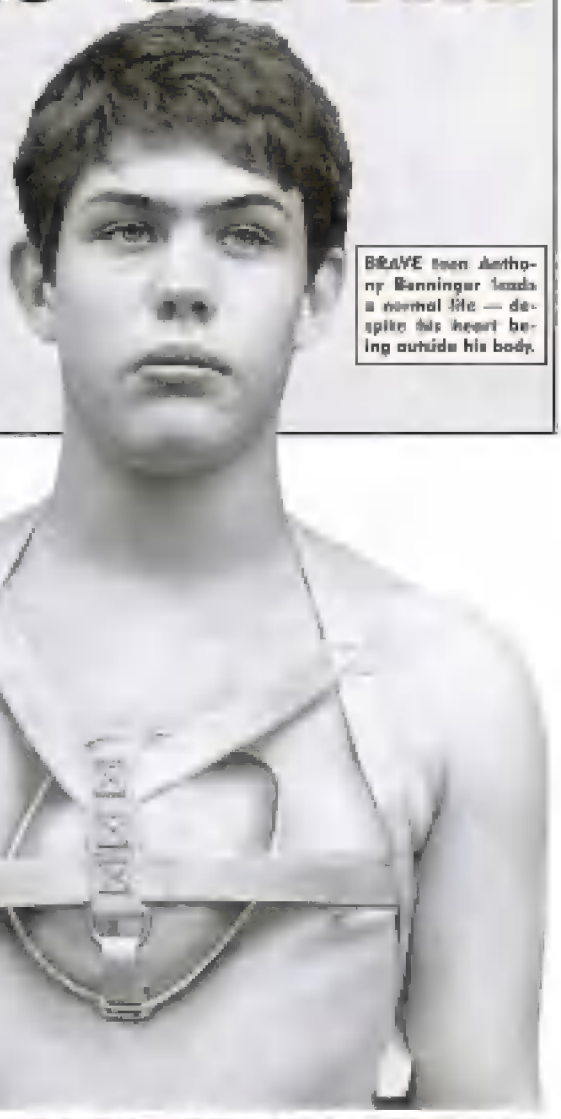
TEEN'S HEART IS ON THE OUTSIDE OF HIS BODY!



BRAVE teen Anthony Benninger leads a normal life — despite his heart being outside his body.

By BEATRICE DEXTER / Correspondent

STANGER, South Africa — Teenager Anthony Benninger is a healthy, happy guy who is an average kid in every way except for one startling thing: His beating heart is on the OUTSIDE of his body.

The 17-year-old boy was born with his bizarre condition, which doctors blame on a genetic abnormality. He wears a special "cage" to protect his heart, but otherwise leads a normal life.

"The doctors say they can't put my heart inside my body because my ribcage is too small to contain it," says Benninger, who graduates from high school this year. "But as long as I am careful, there's no danger from my condition. The metal protector keeps me from accidentally hurting my heart and I take antibiotics to ward off any problem with infection.

"The only way it cramps my style is that I can't play school sports."

One-in-a-trillion boy wears metal cage on his chest!

Anthony was born to parents who lived in a remote area of the Transvaal far from medical care. His parents expected him to die immediately from his bizarre condition, but incredibly their baby survived.

With his small heart lying outside his skin, the baby developed totally normally. By the time doctors saw him a month after his birth, it was clear he was healthy and lively.

In July 1978 the child was flown to Johannesburg, where experts in infant cardiology considered performing surgery to place his heart inside his body.

Tests revealed that the operation was impossible, however, because Anthony's ribs were deformed and his lungs already crowded inside his chest cavity.

"There simply wasn't any room for his heart," explains the boy's mother, widow Cynthia Benninger. "They told me there was no way they were going to repair the condition.

"But the doctors did devise a small metal shield that goes over his heart to keep it from getting injured," the supportive mother quickly affirms, her love for her son obvious.

FAITHFUL pet Zombe isn't bothered one bit by his master's strange condition.

Normally the boy's beating heart is hidden under his clothing, but when he takes his shirt off, it's the unusual sight that prompts many stares and questions from strangers.

Although there is little danger of problems with the organ, doctors take no chances with the boy — and he is given regular doses of antibiotics to nip any infections in the bud. His physicians say he has an excellent chance of leading a long life in spite of his abnormality.

"I wish I were like other kids, but I've learned to accept the way God made me," brave Anthony says. "Everybody has some kind of burden to bear. For me, it's having my heart on public view."

able to do almost anything he wants — within reason, of course."

The boy's heart connects normally to his body through arteries and veins that pass through the skin and enter his chest cavity.

Although the organ hangs from these blood vessels, its function is perfect, cardiologists say, and Anthony doesn't feel any discomfort.

AIDS victims banned from beaches . . . to protect the sharks!

By JOHN LALLY
Correspondent

African officials say AIDS victims can no longer swim in the Atlantic because they might give the disease to sharks — and destroy an entire economy!

"It sounds inhuman but we have a nation to worry about," trade minister Hubert Bentz told reporters in Libreville, Gabon, in West Africa.

"Shark fishing is a major source of Gabon's income. It supplies food and money for our people. If anything were to deplete this resource, all citizens would suffer. We'd like to show compassion for these tragic AIDS victims," he added. "But we feel we must sacrifice the few for the many."

Human rights groups were quick to condemn the government's ban as "a breach of the government's duty to protect its citizens." As many as 20,000 AIDS victims now live in Gabon — which prompted AIDS-patient advocate Bernard Garson to call the no-swim order "a massive conspiracy."

"These poor people are children of the world and the world's oceans belong to all people," he said. "Besides, there isn't a shred of evidence to show that sharks could catch AIDS even if they did eat an AIDS victim."

Trade minister Bentz admitted that scientists have yet to prove that sharks are susceptible to the AIDS virus.

But he pointed out that a major buyer of Gabon's shark products is the People's Republic of China — which is reputed to fear AIDS more than it fears nuclear war.

"The Chinese have made it clear that they will take no chances with AIDS and we are in no position to offend them," he said. "They buy shark meat and skins from us. They even import shark fins for soup."

Bentz acknowledged that the amazing swim ban will be difficult to police.

"We are relying heavily on the willingness of AIDS victims to act responsibly," he said. "Without their help the order will be unenforceable, I'm sure."

City folks raising Thanksgiving turkeys — in their apartments!

Turkey chicks are so cheap these days penny-pinching London housewives are raising their own for Thanksgiving dinner.

The trend is quickly spreading to the United States where city dwellers are gobbling up the baby birds for less than are expected to land on holiday tables, all plump and juicy and free of chemicals and hormones.

While festive partygoers suck on homegrown drumsticks, penny-pinching cooks can savor their savings — their homegrown birds will weigh in at less than 30 cents a pound!

It's time to put America's favorite columnist in the White House!

ED ANGER FOR PRESIDENT!

My millions of fans across this great country have finally talked me into it — I'm running for President!

I'm asking every true-blue American voter to write in my name, Ed Anger, on the ballot so we can get this great country of ours back on its feet again.

Put me in the White House and I'll give you a package deal that will look something like this:

1. I'll cut taxes by 50 percent — immediately. You'll have so much money on payday you'll have to carry it home in grocery bags.

2. I'll put into effect my 10-point plan to provide top-of-the-line medical care for every American — absolutely FREE!

3. I'll raise Social Security benefits by a thousand bucks a month for every retiree — and put into effect an automatic cost-of-living increase of 23.4 percent a year.

4. I'll abolish all welfare — and put those welfare folks to work in hospitals providing the free medical care I was talking about!

5. Every American family would be required to own at least three American cars before they could buy one Jap one. And for every dollar Americans spent buying something made in Japan, the Nips would have to spend a dollar on something made in America, by God.

6. I'd blow up Saddam Hussein — and turn his whole damn country into a wildlife preserve. That oughta make those bleeding-heart environmentalists happy as pigs in slop.

7. I'd order public hangings of those sneaky and loan fat-cats who stole us working stiffs blind in the 1980s.

8. I'd blow up Fidel Castro — and turn his whole damn country into a wildlife preserve, too.

9. I'd balance the goldurned budget in one minute flat. I'm getting tired of hearing about it so I'd just wipe the slate clean and give America a fresh start. The deficit will be zero with a stroke of my pen, for crying out loud. What the hell, Brazil has been doing it for years — and belly laughing all the way to the bank.

10. And I've come up with a great campaign slogan for the Ed Anger For President bandwagon. — WE OWE IT TO OURSELVES.

SHOW your support for Ed Anger — and help send him to the White House. Clip this sticker and tape it in your car window. You are welcome to make copies of it and give them to your friends.

Ed Anger For President
POLL

☐ YES: I'm going to write Ed Anger's name on my presidential ballot so we can get America back on its feet again.

☐ NO: I'll never vote for Ed Anger even if he is the smartest guy in the presidential race and would have this country on its feet in no time flat.

Send to Presidential Poll, Weekly World News, 600 S. East Coast Ave., Lantana, Fla. 33462.

Motorist finds human arm dangling from his truck!

By JACK ALEXANDER
Staff writer

Shocked salesman Ken Culver thought he'd run over a possum along a darkened road until he got to work — and discovered a man's arm wedged under his pickup.

"I freaked out. I went to get my supervisor to make sure I was seeing what I thought I was seeing," Cpl. T. L. Crawford. "I had no idea I'd struck a person."

The bizarre accident occurred about 3:35 a.m. as Culver was driving along Highway 27 from his home in Cairo, Ga., to his job in Tallahassee.

About a mile north of Havana, Fla., Culver recalled running over what he referred to as a "small bump."

Thinking it was a possum or some other small animal, he kept bump, I didn't think anything of it," Culver said.

But when he saw the bloody arm, Culver immediately called emergency 911 and reported what had happened.

Meanwhile, an ambulance had already taken James Jackson, 24, to a Tallahassee hospital. Jackson, who reportedly had been drinking, was lying partially on the road when Culver's pickup ran over his left ently walked about a quarter-mile down the road toward his home before he passed out from the pain and loss of blood," Crawford explained.

"Another motorist saw him and called an ambulance. Unfortunately, surgeons weren't able to re-attach the arm."

"I still feel a little shaky about it," said Culver, who was charged with leaving the scene of an accident involving serious bodily injury.

THE PET YOU LIKE REVEALS YOUR PERSONALITY!

A new study reveals that the type of pet you prefer reveals a lot about your personality!

Here are some of the most popular pets and what your favorite reveals about you, according to British psychologist Marjorie Castle, who recently concluded her fascinating two-year study:

CATS: You're very independent. You don't need the esteem of others, have your own opinions and make up your own mind about issues. You have an eye for the beautiful and appreciate fine art, flowers and antiques.

HAMSTER owners are shy and very sensitive.

DOG lovers are friendly, warm people.

DOGS: You're friendly, warm and open, with an optimistic and upbeat outlook on life. You're not a gossip and you would never hurt other people behind their backs. You like children and you're a very giving person.

FISH: You're a good observer and a good listener. You think deeply before you make decisions and you never get hysterical or flustered in a crisis.

BIRDS: You love freedom and get tense and jumpy when cooped up. You also love to travel and aren't the type to stay home during a vacation. You're cheerful, sociable and often the life of the party.

You love going out and prefer flashy clothes.

GERBILS and HAMSTERS: Deep down, you're shy and sensitive, though you'd like to be sociable and outgoing. You prefer indoor to outdoor activities and you're an avid sports fan — but rather watch than take part.

SNAKES: You're very proper....a person who knows the right etiquette in social situations.

INDEPENDENT people are the kind who have cats.

You're a very loyal friend who goes out of the way to help pals. Also, you're a bargain hunter and a rugged individual.

TURTLES: You're a loner and sometimes like to retreat into your shell to ponder deep thoughts. You move slowly toward goals, but always get there. You're mathematically inclined and have an easy time balancing your budget each month.

You can be relied on to finish every job you start — and do it without complaining.

Man's eyeballs pop out when he eats a double-decker sandwich!

He opened his mouth so wide his eyes shot right out of his head!

By SCOTTY PAUL
Correspondent

Late night snacker Steve Pearcy opened his mouth so wide to chomp down on a huge double-decker sandwich — his eyes popped out.

"He apparently put too much strain on the muscles to his eyes and they snapped just like a rubber band if you stretch it too taut," said an ophthalmologist who is treating the horror-stricken young man.

"In all my years I have never heard of this happening. It's definitely a textbook case. Unfortunately, there's nothing we can do to bring back his vision."

The super sandwich that doomed Steve, 32, to a life of darkness measured an incredible four inches thick and included piles of turkey, ham, bologna, two kinds of cheese, tomato, lettuce and onion.

"I've been eating double-decker sandwiches most of my life," said Steve, who whipped up the whopper when he returned home after watching a Monday night football game on TV at a Chicago bar.

"I opened my mouth wide to take a bite and my eyes popped right out of their sockets," he said.

"One of them fell in my lap and the other one on the kitchen table.

"I was hysterical. I felt my way over to the telephone and dialed 911. When I told the operator my eyes had bounced out of my head, she thought I was putting her on. Paramedics rushed me and my eyes to the hospital, but there was nothing they could do except treat me for shock."

Ironically, Steve has worked as a welder the last five years without any damage to his eyes. "I've always been careful to wear protective goggles at work and then to lose my eyes eating a sandwich is almost too much to take," Steve said.

"I'm on a list to get a guide dog. I guess I'll have to make the best of the rest of my life. At least now I can eat all the double-deckers I please."

MONSTER sandwich like this one was too much for hungry Chicago-area welder Steve Pearcy.

BIZARRE accident has left Steve totally blind. "I'm on a

Sour milk zaps wrinkles, warts and pimples, say skin experts

Put sour milk, fruit juice or old wine on your warts, pimples, age spots and wrinkly skin — and they'll vanish like magic, say dermatologists.

Alpha hydroxy acids, the sour compounds found in fruits, milk and sugar cane, have long been recognized for their ability to moisturize the skin, according to the American Academy of Dermatology.

More than 2,000 years ago, Cleopatra is reported to have kept looking beautiful by bathing in sour milk and ladies of the French court used old wine to banish blemishes and keep their complexions smooth.

Now there is new evidence that these alpha hydroxy acids, in more powerful doses, are effective as face peels for people with disfiguring skin conditions and for combating "certain scaly disorders," said Dr. Paul Bergstresser, a dermatology professor at the University of Texas South-

The sweet little filly I married is really a nag!

Confidential

Dear Confused in Newmah: Confused isn't the word for it. You're insane!

Dear Concerned in Maine: I don't care what your boyfriend says — there's no such thing as a birth control pill for men!

Dear Wondering in Burgin: In a bedroom, yes. In an elevator, no.

Dear Enlightened in Mangham: If marijuana makes you so smart, pinhead, what are you doing in jail?

Dear Millionaire in Linebaro: Send money, then we'll talk!

Dear Robbed in Tully: Next time do what I do — stash the valuables in your brassiere!

Dear Tubby in Hancock: I've always had a knockout body so I really can't help you.

Dear Worried Girl in Parkville: You should have thought about that before you got drunk and passed out at your brother's fraternity party!

Dear Dotti: I married the sweetest little gal you'd ever want to meet but as soon as we tied the knot everything — and I do mean everything — changed.

Instead of catering to my every whim like she did when we were dating, she suddenly started acting like I was her personal slave.

Even worse, she started nagging me about everything from the way I hold a fork to my choice of clothes. I've tried to get her to chill out but she won't listen. What should I do? — Nagged in Osgood

Dear Nagged: I get a lot of boneheaded letters but this one takes the cake. If you really want your wife to stop nagging you get smart — and do what she says!

Teachers get a bad rap but I think they're a class act!

Dear Dotti: Everybody has a bad opinion about American education but they've got it all wrong. I'm a teacher and I know for a fact that America has the finest instructors and classrooms in the world. Please tell your readers, Dotti. I'm sure they'll agree. — Teacher in Dallas

Dear Teacher: You call yourself a teacher but I found 11 spelling errors and six sentence fragments in your short, stupid letter. Get with it, bonehead. Our precious children aren't going to learn ANYTHING until brain-damaged idiots like you wise up — and get the hell out of our classrooms!

Boyfriend's bushy beard gives me the willies!

Dear Dotti: My boyfriend and I had a wonderful relationship until he sprouted a big, bushy beard. It's very wiry and when we cuddle I feel like I'm kissing a scouring pad. I've actually thought about cutting the beard off while he's sleeping. Help! — Prickled in Macon

Dear Prickled: Don't cut the beard off — cut your boyfriend off. If he's any kind of man at all he'll be clean-shaven within a week — I personally guarantee it!

How can I keep my son from becoming a scuzzy lawyer?

Dear Dotti: My 22-year-old son wants to go law school. I happen to think lawyers are scum of the earth — and it's heartbreaking to think that my own flesh and blood would even CONSIDER making a living like that. How can I make my son see the light? — Mom in Elmo

Dear Mom: If your son has his heart set on becoming a lawyer there's not a whole heck of a lot you can do about it. Just watch what you say around him — especially if you don't want to be the first innocent person he sues!

Kids should be able to do whatever they want!

Dear Dotti: I read the so-called Children's Bill of Rights that you published recently and it ticked me off. I say children have the right to be seen AND heard; to do whatever they want; to never be spanked; to make whatever kind of grades they want and have parents wait on them hand and foot. So there! — Stephanie in Casper

Dear Stephanie: Everyone is entitled to an opinion, even an idiot like you. By the way, don't you EVER write to me again!

Dotti will answer your letters — and tell it like it is. Just write to her, c/o Weekly World News, 600 South East Coast Ave., Lantana, Fla. 33462.

Telephone Psychics Amaze Callers with Their Powers.

Katrina Kerr – Nationally-known psychic and founder of the National Psychic Advisor Network

Incredible Psychic Powers Only A Phone Call Away!

Psychic's winning numbers hit the jackpot. The discovery of a lost $250,000 fortune. Piercing insight. Amazing predictions. Now the irrefutable evidence can be disclosed.

There are many who believe that we do not fully understand all the powers in the universe. The amazing abilities that exist within our very own minds. Now through the National Psychic Advisor Network everyone can hear startling psychic predictions for themselves.

Astounding stories that can only be described as miraculous. Instant wealth brought by mystical life numbers and lost fortunes uncovered by penetrating psychic insight. Incredible encounters like these can now be experienced by all with the National Psychic Advisor Network.

This impressive collection of pure psychic power was made possible by and founder of the National Psychic Advisor Network. Katrina's goal was to bring together the world's best psychics for everyone's benefit. She has achieved this through the network's telephone service manned 24 hours a day by gifted psychics, mediums and spiritual counselors.

Then Katrina's dream came true in 1988 with the creation of the National Psychic Advisor Network, untold numbers of people have felt the unforgettable effects of the psychic realm. Now you too can be amazed by their fascinating metaphysical powers like so many before.

There Is Power in Numbers

For one lucky gambler this popular saying came true in the most unbelievable of ways after reading the powerful book "How To Find Your Winning Number" by Herb Dewey. He became curious and in May of 1989 decided to put the power of numbers to the ultimate test during a trip to Las Vegas.

According to the astonishing Astral number system unveiled in Dewey's book, the man's life numbers were 4, 9, 3, and 7. The Astral number system is only one of the incredible discoveries Dewey has disclosed in his many books, tapes and lectures.

Of his many gambling options, he chose Keno, a game based on correctly picking a group of randomly selected numbers. He played his four life numbers with four other favorites. To the man's amazement, Dewey's system proved true. He hit eight out of eight on the Keno machine, winning $10,000!

This incredible experience made him such a strong believer in the psychic's thanking him for his mystical assistance and asking for more information on his psychic abilities. He even asked if it was possible to receive a personalized psychic reading performed by Dewey himself.

Psychic Finds Lost Fortune

A woman from Colorado was recently speaking with psychic Katrina Kerr when Katrina insisted that the woman had some valuable papers or certificates nearby. The woman thought this was a reference to some penny stocks she had bought some time before, but that had been sold for cash soon after.

Katrina insisted that the stocks hadn't been sold and were still near. "I feel strongly that this money is around you. These papers are in a box somewhere and they are not being used."

Because the psychic was so insistent, the woman searched her basement for the papers. In a dusty old box she found the stock certificates she thought she had sold!

Through further investigation, she learned that because of a stock split and change in company ownership, what were once penny stocks were now worth over $250,000!

"I was unable to deal with it for a couple of days," the woman said. "I didn't dare believe it. You have to understand, I'd been living on food stamps and a very small income for months."

When she heard of the woman's good fortune, Katrina said, "It's wonderful when I can utilize my abilities to help someone in her situation. But she did her part, by listening to what I had to tell her."

FIVE U.S. SENATORS ARE SPACE ALIENS!

Washington is reeling from a space alien's stunning allegation that five members of the U. S. Senate are extraterrestrials. Is he telling the truth? WEEKLY WORLD NEWS November 3, 1992

ALIEN'S BOMBSHELL: 5 SENATO

WASHINGTON — A space alien who stunned the world when he met with presidential candidates George Bush, Bill Clinton and Ross Perot dropped yet another bombshell when he invited Clinton and Bush to a summit conference in Washington and revealed that five U.S. senators are extraterrestrials just like he is!

It is not clear what the space alien was trying to accomplish by naming veteran Senators Orrin Hatch, Sam Nunn, Alan Simpson, John Glenn and Nancy Kassebaum as undercover ambassadors from another planet.

But sources close to Bush and Clinton say the alien is almost certainly trying to secure a cabinet post in the next administration.

And if that is the case, the creature might very well have revealed the names of our space alien senators to prove that extraterrestrials are not only capable of guiding the destinies of mankind, they have the track record to prove it.

"Those five senators have a total of 81 years experience at the highest levels of American government and stand as shining examples of what aliens are able to accomplish while working for and with an inferior species, in this case, human beings," declared author and UFO expert Nathaniel Dean.

Dean cited sources close to Governor Clinton and President Bush when he blew the lid off the historic summit in a report to newsmen in Washington.

By NICK MANN

Exclusive report from the Nation's Capital

"If the alien really is seeking a cabinet post, he's got five impeccable references in Senators Hatch, Kassebaum, Glenn, Simpson and Nunn," he continued. "But even if he isn't seeking such a post, revealing their true identities to President Bush and Gov. Clinton was a political masterstroke.

"In one fell swoop the creature managed to put both men in his debt while keeping both of them as friends.

"Regardless of who wins the election, this alien will have the president's ear and trust.

"If he wants a cabinet post he'll get a cabinet post. If he wants power he'll get power. It's as simple as that."

Not surprisingly, Dean's report touched off a controversy that is expected to rage for months or even years to come. Skeptics were quick to cry "hoax."

But supporters were just as quick to point out that Dean's record as a writer and researcher with close ties t[o] the power elite is beyond challenge.

The expert courageously faced the wrath of the Secret Service when he reported on previous meetings he had with Bush in 1991, and with Perot earlier this year.

The President and Governor issued no denials when confronted with reports during televised news conferences that were covered by reporters around the world.

gations and initially denied them. But in the final analysis, two of the senators resigned themselves to the fact that their covers were blown.

Contacted at his office in Washington, Glenn, a former NASA astronaut who orbited the planet in 1962, said through an aide:

"Okay . . . okay . . . you found us out but remember this — mankind is not alone."

Nunn went even farther than that when he suggested that the five senators named as extraterrestrials are just the tip of the iceberg.

"I'm almost positive there are more," the senator, speaking through an aide, said.

with Bush and Clinton in a CIA safe house in Washington on October 14.

The 90-minute meeting was limited to a discussion of the five senators and the roles they play in U.S. politics. "Clinton and Bush have been tight-lipped about the meeting but all hell is breaking loose behind the scenes," said Dean.

"In fact, I'm told that Bush has created a special task force to study the ramifications of having extraterrestrials in the Senate.

"The first question that came to my mind was whether the senators are U.S. citizens and eligible to serve in the Senate," he continued. "Clinton and Bush apparently asked the same question and were assured that the senators are U.S. citizens and qualified for public office.

"I assume that they were born in America to extraterrestrial parents who came to Earth many, many years ago. And even though the senators might look human, I'm told that, in this case, appearances are deceiving.

"In his meeting with the alien, President Bush specifically asked the extraterrestrial why the senators don't look alien. The alien answered: 'The senators look human because they choose to look human. It is a simple matter for us to change our forms.'"

The alien's allegations raise more questions than they answer, of course, and only Clinton and Bush have heard the whole story.

"I, for one, want to know where these extraterrestrials came from and why they want to run our country," said Dean.

"From all appearances they have the best interests of mankind at heart. But as the alien himself said, appearances can be deceiving."

Angry guy dangles girlfriend's kitty out sixth-story window

. . . and drops it!

By JACK ALEXANDER
Staff writer

An angry boyfriend dangled his sweetie's favorite cat out a sixth-story window to get her attention during a lover's quarrel. Unfortunately, the kitty-cat squirmed loose — and plunged to her death.

"He said he didn't mean for the cat to fall, but if he hadn't picked it up in the first place, the poor little thing would still be alive," said animal control officer Wayne Besenty of Long Beach, Calif.

Besenty plans to file an animal cruelty charge against the boyfriend, who he won't identify until the charge is filed. If convicted, the guy could be fined up to $20,000 and sentenced up to six months in jail.

"They were arguing and she wasn't paying any attention to him," Besenty said. "He picked up her long-haired black Persian cat and held it out the window of their apartment.

"The cat wiggled free from his grasp, fell out the window and landed on the pavement six stories below. Almost every bone in her body was broken."

His girlfriend at first told animal control officers he tossed the cat out the window, according to Besenty. "Later she changed her story and said it was an accident," he added.

Whether it was accidental or intentional, animal control officers plan to file the charge.

Boozy Bjarne Sorenson screamed his lungs out when he plopped down on the toilet in his favorite bar and couldn't get up — because the toilet seat had been smeared with super glue!

Bjarne's drinking buddies rushed to the john when they heard his anguished cries, but try as they might, they couldn't pull him off the potty.

Eventually, firemen managed to free the ticked-off tippler, who'd fallen prey to unidentified pranksters. He was rushed to a Copenhagen, Denmark, hospital to be treated for a sore butt.

Gal sweats 5 gallons of water a day!

BIZARRE disease caused Sarah Backlund's sweat glands to go haywire!

Nobody will go out with me, says princess of perspiration

By JOE BERGER
Staff writer

Sad-eyed secretary Sarah Backlund is a bachelor gal who oughta have hunks hounding her day and night. But nobody wants to get within a country mile of hapless Sarah — because she sweats like a racehorse!

"People won't have anything to do with me 'cause I smell like I just went 15 rounds with George Foreman," the forlorn lady told reporters in Pittsburgh.

"The doctors figure I sweat five gallons a day and they say that's gotta be some kind of world record. But unfortunately, all they can do is measure it — they don't have the slightest idea how to stop it."

Heartsick Sarah's nightmare began two years ago when a bizarre illness left her perspiring puddles.

"I went to South America on a tour and when I came home I got this real bad fever that kept me in bed for three weeks," recalled the reigning champ of damp. "Eventually I got over the temperature, the headaches — everything but the constant perspiration.

"The damn sweating just got worse and worse, and now it's so bad I actually get little pools of water around my feet if I stand in one spot too long. And I don't dare wear nice clothes because I put them on once and they're ruined forever. That's pretty heartbreaking, you know."

But embarrassed Sarah, 24, says the worst part is she stinks like a mule no matter how often she showers or how much deodorant she slashes on. "My boss has been real nice to me, but even he insists that I work off in an office all by myself, way down the hall from where the other girls work," the princess of perspiration said in an interview.

"Every place I go, it seems people just run to get away from me. I don't dare get on a crowded bus for fear somebody'd get killed in the stampede of people trying to get off.

"And boyfriends? — forget it! I used to have lots of dates, but when you smell like I do, the guys have a way of disappearing fast, if you know what I mean."

Now YOU can send messages to space aliens!

A financial computer software firm received hundreds of unusual replies when they advertised for messages to be sent into outer space!

"Hi mom," "Use the small fork for the salad," and "Please don't feed in Uncle Gilbert's wheat field anymore," were just a few of the communications sent in when Dun & Bradstreet Software solicited messages for its quarterly publication New World magazine. Chicago reader Horst Koppula wrote, "I am an immigrant to America. It has been a wonderful experience. I would like to be an immigrant to your world and to invite you here."

Company officials plan to have the messages transmitted from a satellite dish.

WINNING THE LOTTERY WILL RUIN YOUR LIFE!

You'll be rich — but wish you were dead!

Winning a big fortune in a lottery seems like a dream come true, but it can actually ruin your life, say experts.

"People think that winning big in the lottery will solve all their problems — but instant wealth creates severe problems, too," said Dr. James Hannum.

Some of the problems the experts cite are:

● The enormous responsibility that goes along with handling a great sum of money.

"When you receive a windfall, it comes with a built-in set of financial worries and responsibilities that you never had to bother about before," said psychiatrist Jack Leedy.

"You have to figure out ways to invest the money wisely and draw up a long-term budget plan, taking into account what your taxes will eat up.

"All this takes tedious time and effort."

● Difficulty in dealing with professional advisers.

"If you won a lottery, you'd find yourself suddenly involved with a whole range of experts, from lawyers to accountants to stockbrokers to tax shelter specialists.

"They'd be falling all over each other to solicit your business — and you'd have to make the difficult decision of whom to trust," Dr. Leedy explained.

● Questioning all of your friendships.

"Once you get a huge amount of money, it's easy to begin wondering about the sincerity of some of your friends," said Dr. Leedy. "That is because there are people who'll play up to someone rich in the hope that they'll reap financial rewards."

● Keeping your mind and body young and active.

"If you won the lottery, your initial reaction might be to quit your job, buy a house with a pool and sit around all day," said Dr. Leedy. "But if that continues, it's the surest way to become a dull, boring, useless individual."

● Loss of sense of identity when you quit your job.

Lottery winners who quit their job find that they're suddenly a "new person" — a millionaire instead of a truck driver, carpenter or whatever.

They'll miss all of their friends from the job — and from the neighborhood if they buy a new house and move away.

Said Dr. Hannum: "People tend to think only of the positive when they think of winning, and forget that it also has enormous impact in the negative sense."

Hindu holy man Shree Pramukh Swami is so dedicated to a sexless way of life that he hasn't laid eyes on a woman in 44 years. The swami, 63, said that when he was 19 he took a vow of celibacy — and hasn't even glanced at a woman since then.

'A grizzly ate my husband while I watched!'

By BEATRICE DEXTER
Special correspondent

Horrified tourist Cherry Recksten watched helplessly as her beloved husband saved her from attack by a 12-foot grizzly — and then was eaten alive before her very eyes!

The Winchester, England, woman cowered in the branches of a tree where she had scrambled for safety when the bear lunged at her husband Trevor, 46, knocked him to the ground and savagely bit and chewed on him. She saw the 300-pound beast tear his body to shreds and then eat his left leg.

While the attack was still going on, Cherry ran to a nearby campsite for help. Rangers arrived too late to save her husband, but Cherry was airlifted to a hospital and successfully underwent surgery to repair deep wounds on her head, back and buttocks.

Cherry Recksten

Husband Trevor

"The bear came out from behind some bushes and started to head toward our backpacks," recalled Cherry, 43, who was hiking with Trevor in the Canadian Rockies when the tragic attack occurred. "We started running in different directions and then it caught up with me.

"I started to climb up a tree and the bear pulled my boots off. It dragged me down and I could feel it biting on the back of my scalp. Trevor started screaming and yelling to try and distract the bear and he told me to run, just run.

"The bear threw himself at Trevor and attacked him. I was still up the tree when the bear knocked him to the ground and started biting him all over."

Badly wounded Cherry, with a third of her scalp ripped away, finally made a run for it, dragging herself 100 yards to a tent where an American camper came to her aid. The woman was airlifted to a hospital and 15 other hikers were cleared from the area. Wardens found the bear still at the scene of the attack and killed it with 12-gauge shotguns. Wildlife officials say the tragic couple might have survived their encounter with the grizzly if they had kept their heads. "It appears that both the couple and the bear startled each other," said Gerry Israelson, spokesman for Jasper National Park in Alberta. "The couple knew the rule is to never run but to lie down and play dead — but that's easy to say when you have not got a bear in front of you."

PARK official says that the couple should have done this when they spotted the bear.

Amazing study proves:

Women ARE better workers than men!

By GAIL SUMMERS
Correspondent

Women are more dedicated to work than men, a startling new study reveals. Amazingly, working women want to do the best job they can no matter how much money they earn — even though men have more advantages on the job.

"Both men and women have a strong work ethic, but women's ethic is stronger — despite the fact that women get lower pay.

"They perceive themselves as having fewer advancement opportunities and feel they have less to say in company decisions," said Dr. John Immerwahr, who co-authored the nationwide study of 845 people.

When shown the statement, "I have an inner need to do the best job possible, regardless of pay," 58 percent of the women surveyed agreed with it.

Only 48 percent of the men did, he said.

"Our survey found that only 35 percent of women feel they get good pay in their job versus 42 percent of the men.

"We also found that 27 percent of women think they have a say in company decisions, versus 37 percent of men," he added.

"And we found that 55 percent of women feel they have a good chance of advancement in their work as compared to 58 percent of men," said Dr. Immerwahr, who did the study for the Public Agenda Foundation, a nonprofit research organization.

Working women are also happier on the job than men, according to the nationwide study.

For example, more women than men said they liked their co-workers and also got along better with their bosses.

"Women are glad to work. They are very dedicated and prepared to give a great deal to their work," Dr. Immerwahr said.

SNAIL SEX ORGY!

In the far reaches of a laboratory, a man watches 463 sex-starved snails have orgies in 100 plastic tubs — and it's all in the name of science.

Thomas C. Emmel, a university zoologist, may have saved Florida's last known colony of Stock Island tree snails from extinction. The prof rescued the lusty mollusks from Miami's Monkey Jungle after Hurricane Andrew destroyed their shady hammock.

"The snails have never been happier," he said. "They've been doing nothing but eating and mating."

Scientists are thrilled the endangered snails have adapted so quickly to their new habitat because of their extraordinary ability to reproduce. As hermaphrodites, they possess both male and female sex organs. They stroke one another with the horns over their eyes turns being male and female for two more days. The result is that both turn up pregnant.

Within a few weeks, the snails will start laying as many as 40 eggs apiece and by spring, more than 20,000 could be crawling around.

Granny shows up for driving test — with a kid stuck in grill of her car!

By REX WOLFE / Special correspondent

A 98-year-old woman showed up for her annual driving test with a 3-year-old boy wedged in the grill of her car!

Little Tommy Jackson suffered three broken ribs, a spinal fracture and a severe concussion in the incident. Police officers, who found him jammed in the nose of Gertrude Cox's 1962 Plymouth Belvedere, say it's a miracle he survived at all.

"I've been a cop for 22 years and I've never seen anything like it," said Patrolman Roger Hall, who discovered the boy when he stepped out of his office at the driver's licensing bureau in Melbourne, Australia, to take Mrs. Cox on her driving test.

"I pulled the boy out of the grill and screamed at the old woman to get help but she just shrugged it off and said she wasn't going anywhere until I gave her a driving test.

"I said, 'My God. You've hit a child. Get help!' but she still didn't get it.

"We raced the boy to a hospital in a patrol car and charged Mrs. Cox with leaving the scene of an accident with injuries.

"But her only concern was getting her license renewed so she could keep on driving. It's the damnedest thing I've ever seen."

A police investigation alleged that Mrs. Cox lost control of her car while motoring past a playground on her way to the driving test.

Eyewitnesses said she veered off the road, drove through a soccer field, hit Tommy Jackson, steered back onto the road and continued driving to the license renewal station — 16 blocks away.

The old woman refuses to comment. But Officer Hall said she faces a jail term, fines and the loss of her license if convicted as charged.

"I don't have anything against old folks but this woman shouldn't be behind the wheel," said the cop. "When you drive around with a kid stuck in the grill of your car, something is seriously wrong."

GUNS BELONG IN THE HOME

TOUGH-GUY Charles Bronson knows the right way to use guns!

By JACK ALEXANDER
Staff writer

Having guns in your home really does deter crime, according to a new study for the U.S. Justice Department.

"Unquestionably, guns in the home make criminals very nervous," said a university sociologist who surveyed 1,800 prison inmates in 10 states.

"About 40 percent of the inmates told us they had chosen not to commit a crime at one time or another because they had reason to believe the potential victim was armed," the sociologist said.

A whopping 74 percent of inmates questioned confessed they worried about getting shot. What's more, the study revealed that more criminals fear being blasted by armed civilians than being shot by cops.

Pistol-packin' families scare hell out of criminals!

In fact, civilians shot and killed more than three times as many criminals as the police nationwide in 1981, according to a Florida State University criminologist.

Police reported 690 felons killed, while civilians fatally shot more than 1,200.

About 38 percent of the convicts questioned admitted they had been threatened, shot at, captured or scared away by a potential victim who had a gun.

A whopping 69 percent said they knew of other criminals who had those experiences.

The survey supports the notion that guns in the home do deter crime. But does that mean everyone should have a gun?

If you live in a low-crime area and there are children living in the house, you are probably foolish to keep a gun at home.

But you should seriously consider having a gun if you live in a high-crime area, feel comfortable with guns, take reasonable precautions and

IT'S NEVER TOO LATE . . .

Make history in your old age — like these famous folks!

By BOB SORRELL
Correspondent

It's never too late in life to begin doing what you've always wanted to do — many of history's most famous figures proved that.

As a young man, Cornelius Vanderbilt amassed a fortune buying steamships and establishing a transatlantic passenger line.

But in 1857, when he was 63 years old he developed a new interest — railroads.

Within five years he sold all his steamers, and at age 68 began building a railroad empire. He did so well in his new field that he died leaving a fortune estimated at $100 million.

P.T. Barnum was a successful entrepreneur who managed the famous dwarf Tom Thumb, the Siamese twins Chang and Eng and famed singer Jenny Lind.

He also operated the American Museum in New York, the nation's most popular attraction.

But he was 61 years old when he launched the project that would immortalize him — a traveling circus and animal menagerie called The Greatest Show on Earth. And it still bears his name — the Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey Circus.

Alvina Reynolds became well known when the folk songs she composed were recorded by singing stars Joan Baez, Harry Belafonte, Pete Seeger, the Kingston Trio and others.

She seemed to have everything — except the thing she wanted the most, a singing career.

When she was more than 60 she began singing her own songs — and she has since recorded six albums.

Englishman Peter Mark Roget was a 19th-century scholar, physician and scientist. After retiring from the practice of medicine at age 61, Roget immersed himself in a hobby that had fascinated him for years — compiling lists of words and phrases.

Twelve years later, he produced Roget's Thesaurus of English Words and Phrases — an invaluable reference work for anyone who writes, teaches or has interest in the proper use of words.

The book went through 28 editions in Roget's lifetime and it is still being reprinted year after year.

A FISTFUL OF DOLLARS!

Cleaning lady picks big winners on Wall Street!

By BEATRICE DEXTER
Correspondent

Two investors are raking in a fortune on Wall Street — using hot stock tips supplied by an office cleaning lady!

The Swiss moneymen found Anna Reisheim's scribbled notes on scraps of paper at their Los Angeles office and decided to take a chance on her recommendations for investments. The investments paid off big time and within months turned into a portfolio worth millions of dollars.

"Anna has never had any training or investments of her own, but she's uncannily good at picking stocks," said Helmuth Stoessel, one of two brokers with a Zurich firm who discovered Anna's incredible tips.

"She says she uses her intuition. Whatever she does, it works like a charm. She's amazingly good at picking high earners."

Stoessel and a colleague say they have divided the profits from Anna's investments with the 57-year-old cleaning lady. But the mother of five has not quit dusting and mopping offices in the five-story building where she works.

"I don't intend to quit my job — I enjoy it," Anna told a reporter for a Swiss financial paper. "And who knows how long my winning streak will last? Besides, I have fun with the other girls at work. I would get lonely if I stayed at home. I know I'm earning lots of money from the stocks, but picking stocks doesn't keep me busy. Cleaning offices keeps me busy."

INVESTOR Helmuth Stoessel and his partner have cleared $4 million on Anna's tips.

Stoessel, 31, says he first began running across Anna's scribbled notes back in June of this year. On stock market quotations and scraps of articles torn from newspaper business sections, the woman had circled mere issues of stock, indicating in the margins how many shares she would buy.

The notes kept appearing in the wastebasket near Stoessel's desk, and when Stoessel came into his office in the mornings he and his co-worker would read them. In a short time they realized that Anna's predictions were incredibly accurate and her tips were sure-fire winners.

"We decided to take a chance and invest some of our own money in Anna's recommendations," Stoessel said.

"Since we began following her lead, we've racked up more than $4 million in profits. We sell when she says to sell, we buy when she says to buy. And she's right 100 percent of the

Cheer up! Here's some good news about the economy

One good thing about the recession is that work-related accidental deaths are at their lowest level in nearly 60 years.

A total of 11,600 workers were killed accidentally last year compared to 93,000 in 1990 and 85,600 in 1924, says the National Safety Council.

Traffic fatalities, the largest single category of accidental deaths, totaled 9,990, the lowest level since the council began compiling statistics.

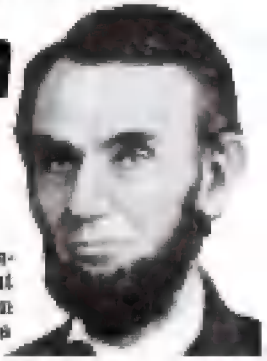
Abraham Lincoln NEVER made a campaign speech!



HONEST Abe never had to go around begging for votes!

Today's presidential campaign is a far cry from what it was like in 1860 — when the Republican Party spent a paltry $100,000 to elect Abraham Lincoln!

What's more, Honest Abe was elected without making even one campaign speech!

But in 1992, presidential candidates spew out one boring speech after another, traveling tens of thousands of miles — and they'll spend a staggering $750 million, experts estimate.

Those are just a few of the eye-opening differences between presidential elections today and those of Lincoln's time — even though the actual election process of the electorial college hasn't changed. But that's about the only thing that has stayed the same.

He didn't kiss voters' butts like today's slimy politicians!

"Today, some candidates launch their campaigns up to two years in advance, spend millions in primary elections, have paid staffs, travel thousands of miles across the nation, give countless speeches and have armies of volunteers working in their behalf," explained election historian Simon Spearman.

"But that wasn't necessary in Lincoln's day. Then, it was considered undignified for a presidential candidate to hit the campaign trail to kiss babies and 'press the flesh.'

"Lincoln allowed the Republican Party bosses and volunteers to spread his message in localized rallies.

"Can you imagine George Bush winning re-election without campaigning? Yet, that's exactly what Lincoln did. And he won even though his chief opponent, Stephen Douglas, broke tradition and campaigned.

"But Douglas did comparatively little traveling — perhaps only about 4,000 miles over several weeks."

In 1860, nobody dreamed of using Lincoln homely. But today, image is all important, and candidates travel with a makeup expert.

Most newspapers were politically controlled and honest reporting was rare.

"Today, with tape recorders, radio and TV, a candidate's words are not left up to partisan reporting," Spearman said.

Another big difference is in foreign policy — one of the major issues in modern presidential elections.

"There was no such thing as a foreign policy to worry about in Lincoln's time," Spearman explained.

More Americans can name The Three Stooges than the Presidential candidates!

AMERICAN HEROES: Larry, Moe and Curly are loved — and remembered — by U.S. citizens!

FORGOTTEN MEN! Bill Clinton, Ross Perot and George Bush are running for president but the vast majority of Americans don't even know their names!

By CLINT THOMAS, Special correspondent

A staggering 68 percent of Americans can name The Three Stooges but only 30 percent can name the three men who are running for president — George Bush, Bill Clinton and Ross Perot!

You heard right. In a Weekly World News poll of 3,246 adults in 26 cities, 2,207 correctly identified the Stooges as Moe, Larry and Curly while only 974, that's just 30 percent, could name presidential candidates Bush, Clinton and Perot.

Two percent, or 65 of those surveyed, couldn't name the candidates or the Stooges. One respondent actually accused an interviewer of asking him a trick question, saying: "I thought The Three Stooges WERE running for president. How the hell can you tell the difference?"

Experts queried about the surprising response to the poll suggested that Americans are tired of politics and politicians and really don't care who's running for president.

"The average American citizen is turned off by the whole process because the candidates are packaged and sold like laundry soap and it's often hard to tell them apart," said one analyst.

"After awhile you don't know if you're listening to Clinton, Bush or Perot on the evening news and even worse, you don't give a damn. The public hears so many lies and so much double talk that they begin to shut the whole campaign out.

"So how can you expect them to remember the names of the candidates? That's the last thing on their minds."

Mrs. J., 58, from Hartford, Conn., instantly rattled off the names of the Stooges but drew a blank when it came to naming the three candidates for president.

"It's easy to remember The Three Stooges because they had different personalities," she said.

"On the other hand, these politicians are like peas in a pod. There's not a bit of differ-

Superstar Michael Jackson's face falls off his skull! Elizabeth Taylor chokes to death on a turkey leg! And the Rolling Stones cancel a world tour after an elevator door slams shut on Mick Jagger's lips!

Those are just a few of the mind-twisting predictions that Peter Meers — who was dubbed the World's Cruelest Psychic after he laughingly predicted the murder of Beatle John Lennon and the AIDS death of actor Rock Hudson years in advance — sees coming to pass between now and the end of 1993.

Here's more:

- Thunder thighs talk show queen Oprah Winfrey loses 87 pounds when her legs are severed in an automobile accident.
- Jerry Lewis is crushed by a falling stage light during his Labor Day telethon for muscular dystrophy.
- Boxing king Mike Tyson stuns the world with the announcement that he's found true love in prison — with an inmate he identifies as "Big Bubba."

HOW TO BEAT FATIGUE

With working women putting in up to 100 hours a week juggling the demands of their job, family and marriage, it's no wonder many suffer from chronic fatigue — but you can beat fatigue and boost your energy by following these tips from experts.

By FRED TOOMEY
Correspondent

"Most women today are working the equivalent of two and one-half jobs," said Dr. Holly Atkinson.

"When given the choice of complaints like anxiety, nervousness, and stress, working women say that fatigue is the number one complaint."

To beat the problem, Atkinson suggests:

✔ Steer away from high-fat foods like beef, pork and whole milk products and switch to chicken, fish and nonfat dairy products. Foods high in fat and sugar drain your energy.

✔ Get everyone in the family to pitch in with the housework. Assign specific chores to each family member, and make a chart listing everyone's tasks — and when they are to be completed.

✔ Organize yourself. Keep a running grocery list on the refrigerator door and jot down items as they run out. Schedule your children's activities at the same time, in the same part of town so you can drop them off with one trip.

✔ Relax your housekeeping standards. Don't let others dictate what your home should look like — and don't feel guilty if your busy schedule forces you to postpone your chores.

✔ Pay for whatever house cleaning services you can afford. Look for grocery stores, dry cleaners and others who deliver.

✔ Get one extra hour of sleep each night. The easiest way to do this is to eliminate an hour of TV watching. At the beginning of the week mark off the shows you really want to watch — and stick to that schedule.

✔ Buy clothes that need little or no upkeep — and stay away from items that need ironing.

✔ Insist on one and one-half hours a day of "personal time" — to exercise, to spend with your spouse or to do something you enjoy with the children. It will boost your energy and help beat fatigue.

✔ Learn to say "no" more often. Start by saying "no" to every other request made on your time. "Explain to your children that you're not a servant and you need regular time-outs every day," Atkinson said.

✔ Refresh yourself with a girls' night out. Women need close relationships outside their family, so get out with your girlfriends once in a while.

Your neighbor may be a SPACE ALIEN!

By MICHAEL TODD
Special report

Many Americans have space aliens living right in their neighborhoods — and you can spot these visitors by looking for certain tip-offs, say UFO experts.

Because aliens may look just like human beings or be disguised as humans, you can't pinpoint them by appearance.

Instead you must look for a combination of unusual behavior patterns and odd details about their homes, experts say.

They listed six signs to watch for — but pointed out that your neighbor would have to display most, if not all, of these traits before you can positively identify him as an alien.

Here's how you can tell!

1. Sleep or work patterns of abnormal length.

"An alien's day on its native planet may be shorter or longer than ours," noted Brad Steiger, a renowned UFO investigator and author.

For this reason, he said, an alien may sleep at odd times of the day or night.

2. A mood change, fear or physical reaction when near certain high-tech hardware that radiates electromagnetic waves.

For example, when around a microwave oven an alien may break out in a rash, said Dr. Thomas Easton, a theoretical biologist and futurist.

3. Anxiety, stress or discomfort when using Earth transportation.

Space aliens are accustomed to safe, highly advanced forms of transportation — so they feel uncomfortable and also endangered when riding in a vehicle such as a car or train — which are primitive vehicles to them, explained Steiger.

4. Constant information gathering.

"A space alien's prime objective is to study us and our planet — this information gathering is vitally important," revealed Steiger.

For this reason, aliens will seem to be constantly buying newspapers, magazines, language tapes and other material that will help them in their information-gathering efforts, say experts.

5. Ownership of unusually large amounts of high-technology equipment, such as computers.

Aliens need this type of equipment to help them collect and store information, said Steiger.

6. The misuse of common everyday items.

Many objects that we take for granted may seem foreign to an alien and it may not know how to properly use them, explained Dr. Easton.

Gramps shoots grandson, 3, during cops & robbers game!

Gentle grandpa Franz Danziger was playing cops and robbers with his 3-year-old grandson Siggy when he pulled a real pistol out from his belt — and accidentally blew the kid's brains out!

Shell-shocked Franz, 70, said he used a real .38-caliber automatic because he couldn't find the toy gun he normally used when he and Siggy played shoot-'em-up.

"I didn't know the gun was loaded," the grieving gramps told police in Rostock, Germany.

"I wish I'd shot myself in the head instead."

You can make it the best year of your life

By JOHN CONNERS
Special correspondent

You can make 1993 the best year of your life with tips from experts in the areas of health, finance, career, relationships and recreation.

Here they are:

HEALTH

Forget fitness fads and crash diets if you want to be healthy and happy.

"Too many people wake up January 1, leap out of bed and resolve to be fit," declared Dr. Daniel Hanley. "If they're not careful, they will end up far from happy — and far from fit."

His advice is: "Take it easy. Decide exactly what you are getting fit for. Is it jogging? Tennis? Swimming? Or just shedding pounds. Set a target and work toward it with a properly planned program.

"Would-be joggers, for example, should start off walking and gradually cut down the time it takes to reach a certain point."

FINANCE

Get back to the simple things in life, advises economist Helen McHugh.

"We must decide what's really important if we are to get more out of life," she said. "And to do that, you should make a list of the purchases you absolutely have to make — and those that you can do without.

"Buy accordingly," she said. "Whenever possible, make repairs instead of replacements."

CAREER

Never get discouraged — that is the plain, straightforward advice for those wanting to climb the ladder of success in 1993.

"This year will be a real challenge for people who want success," said business attorney Gerard Nierenberg. "The most important thing is to make a career plan and long-range goals for yourself.

"This counts for the housewife, too," he added. "She should set herself a goal and stick to it."

RELATIONSHIPS

There is only one way to make 1993 the best year of your life for getting along with other people — sit down and talk to them "from your heart."

"Say to your wife or husband, 'Darling, let's talk about us and our relationship, what we want out of life, what bothers us, our fears, our dislikes, our problems, our hopes for this new year,'" advised family and marriage expert Dr. John Hudson.

"Once that first barrier of communication is broken down, the words of intimacy and confidence can come pouring out and a totally new in-depth relationship can be built."

Parents, he continued, should "ask children what they want out of life, what their problems are, what they think of you as a mother or father — and start listening to them.

"At work, find out what your co-workers are thinking — learn about their goals and frustrations. You might also keep in better touch with your friends, perhaps invite them around more often."

RECREATION

Recreation can really help you enjoy 1993, says psychologist Sam Janus. "Keep busy. Don't sit back and wallow in problems. Get up, get out and do something," he said. "It can be physical or mental, just as long as you get your mind off other things. Try for some new experiences whether it's a theater group, scuba diving or going back to school.

"Look inward to find what really pleases you and outward for others to share it with. The most rewarding activity is laughing. If you keep laughing, 1993 will be your best year ever."

Storm dumps weird blobs in pond

The day after Hurricane Andrew blew through southern Louisiana, bizarre, 3-foot-long, jelly-like blobs bobbed to the surface of Elwood Guillot's backyard pond.

"I'm 78, and I've been fishing in this pond since I was a boy, and I've never seen anything like that in fresh water," Guillot said.

"I've seen fish and jellyfish, but I've never seen anything like this."

Guillot's grandson made the puzzling discovery of the transparent blobs when he went to feed the fish in the pond behind the family's home in Independence, about 50 miles south of New Orleans.

Experts are baffled. No one can yet explain where the blobs came from or even if they are animal, vegetable or

WOMAN MARRIES A SHARK!

By JOE BERGER / Staff writer

Bashful bachelor gal Andrea Lyons longed to say "I do" and settle down, but every guy she took a liking to left her high and dry — so dingbat Andrea married a man-eating shark!

As 40 flabbergasted guests looked on, the elated lady tied the knot with her pet shark Archie in a seaside ceremony at her home in Sydney, Australia.

"Everybody says Archie is dangerous and that someday he's going to eat me alive — but compared to the men I've met lately, he's an absolute angel," the blushing bride gushed to reporters.

"He's gentle and he kisses nice and he doesn't leave his dirty underwear lying all over the house. As far as I'm concerned, he's one helluva catch."

Adoring Andrea, 32, tied the knot with her beady-eyed beau in late September, but she actually landed her dream fish five months earlier when she hauled him aboard her brother's 50-foot boat off the Australian coast.

"I was shocked as hell when I realized I had a shark on my line, and I'll tell you, he fought like crazy," the flaky saleslady recalled. "It took more than an hour before I finally brought him in, and by that time we were both exhausted.

"The guys started to club him to death, but he was lying there looking at me with those kind eyes and I just couldn't let 'em do it. We put some water in the fish box and put Archie in there and strapped the lid down tight and took him home with us.

"I guess it was love at first sight for both of us."

Infatuated Andrea transferred Archie to a king-size tank behind her home and the kooky twosome have been soul mates ever since.

"There was a surfer killed by a shark out in that area two days before I caught Archie and people are saying Archie's the one that ate him," said the starry-eyed bride. "But I swim and cuddle with him every day, and to me he's a real sweetheart."

'He's a lot better than any man!'

Still, daffy Andrea didn't decide to get hitched to the fish till a bank turned down her credit card application because she didn't have a hubby to help her pay the bills.

"I make $23,000 a year and have a good life, but everybody treated me like I had leprosy because I wasn't married," she said. "And the harder I tried to find Mr. Right, the more I realized most guys are jerks. Finally I decided I'd just marry Archie and put the singles scene behind me."

So, decked out in a swimsuit and scuba gear, the loony-tunes lady said "I do" to her toothy groom and an embarrassed pastor pronounced them shark and wife.

Moments later, ecstatic Andrea gave her new hubby a big, wet kiss and headed into the house for champagne and cake with her guests.

"I asked 300 people to my wedding, but only 40 showed up," the nutty newlywed said. "I guess when you send out invitations announcing your mar-

IT PAYS TO BE CRAZY!

People who have only one oar in the water aren't as bad off as most folks believe — they make more money than normal people!

That's the result of a study of 5,000 men and women by university researchers in Paris, France.

WEEKLY WORLD NEWS, November 1, 1988

The WACKY ways people have struck it rich!

You can earn big bucks in unusual ways such as reconditioning car batteries, retrieving sunken golf balls or selling balloons, an expert says.

"The important thing is to choose a business that will hold your interest," said a spokesman for the American Entrepreneurs Association (AEA).

For example, you can make big money with minimum cash outlay by reconditioning old auto batteries.

"The old batteries will usually cost up to $4 and materials and electricity for recharging will cost about 50 cents per battery. You do nothing more than replace the battery acid, clean the exterior and recharge. And the reconditioned battery will sell for $19 to $25."

You can buy old batteries from junkyards, advertise in newspapers for them, or once you get going in business, obtain them from customers who buy your reconditioned batteries.

The battery acid can be bought at chemical supply houses. And you can sell the reconditioned batteries at flea markets or you can even become a regular supplier for used-car lots and car-rental agencies.

"Entrepreneurs are making $50,000 a year this way," the spokesman said.

Here are some more offbeat ways to make big bucks:

You can make a fortune off:
- Balloons
- Tree stumps
- Lost golf balls

● Retrieving sunken golf balls from water holes and then reselling them. The AEA has discovered one hard worker who collected 78,000 sunken balls in a month. And each ball can be sold for 25 cents or more.

● Apartment preparation service — By doing such work as fixing screens, plastering nail holes, shampooing carpets and painting, one husband-and-wife team netted $50,000 in their first year of business.

The best way to get started in this field is to contact property management firms that handle rental units.

● Making tables from tree stumps — Some tables made from tree stumps sell for $300 to $400 each — and the stumps are yours free for the taking.

You can sell the tables at flea markets or from your home or garage, or you can arrange to supply furniture stores and other retail outlets.

● Cleaning home and office windows — You can easily make $30 an hour in this cash business.

An easy way to get started in this field is simply to distribute mailbox circulars in the area where you want to work. Or you can advertise in shop windows, newspapers or the yellow pages.

● Selling balloons — This growing field can yield as much as $5,000 a month, AEA researchers say.

The trick to making money in this business is to go where the crowds are — fairs, carnivals and sporting events, for example.

Contact the event organizers and arrange for space where you can sell the balloons.

America's stunning WW2 plan to bomb Japan — with bats!

Few Americans know it, but the United States considered a plan to defeat Japan during World War II by bombarding the country with millions of bats armed with miniature napalm bombs!

The bizarre bat-attack strategy was the brainchild of Jack Coulter, a 17-year-old California high school student. His amazing idea actually reached the desk of President Franklin D. Roosevelt, who passed it on to one of his aides with the notation, "This man is not a nut."

bats with tiny time bombs and release them in the skies over Japan. The bats would roost in the attics of homes and buildings. At the appointed time, the bombs would explode — burning entire cities to the ground.

The plan worked well during a domestic test. But the military abandoned it in favor of a

How to stop office jerks from driving you crazy!

By GEORGE BAKER
Special correspondent

Every office has troublemakers who disrupt things with their antics. Here are the five worst types — and how to deal with them.

Bellyacher: "This person loves to criticize you, your work, other employees, the company — in fact, anything and everything," said psychologist Fredrick Koenig.

"Tell the bellyacher that he's achieving nothing by bothering everyone needlessly. Tell him to be constructive instead of being a complainer, but coat your advice with a compliment.

"Tell him he's too much of a perfectionist and it might be too much to expect such perfection from everybody else."

One other piece of advice: Don't get drawn into an argument with bellyachers. They love to argue — and you'll never win, says psychologist Bruce Abt.

Joker: This person uses humor in a malicious way. He makes racist remarks and tells X-rated jokes, says Dr. Abt, an expert in business and industrial relations.

If his rude comments offend you, tell him outright that you don't like them. "That will deflate him on the spot, especially if other people are around," said Dr. Abt.

Martyr: "This type is always whining about how he is overburdened with work," says Dr. Abt.

When he complains, help him list his duties and then suggest ways he can handle his work load, he advised. "Often the list will reveal he's not being overworked in the first place."

Nitpicker: "This type is consumed with envy and is always taking potshots at others' work to promote his own self-importance," said Dr. Koenig, a social psychologist.

"But nitpickers are cowards and never confront the person they're criticizing. Ignore the nitpicker or tell him to speak directly to the person he's criticizing.

"That should end it right there."

Know-It-All: This self-proclaimed expert thinks that he knows absolutely everything.

He's especially dangerous in an office because he "fools fellow workers into thinking he's more competent than he really is, resulting in serious office foul-ups," said Dr. Koenig.

When explaining instructions to a know-it-all, be sure to put everything in writing. That way, he says, "you won't share the blame when the sky

Smart facts about your intelligence!

How much do you know about your own intelligence? You may be surprised to learn that many ideas we have about being smart are really nothing more than misconceptions and myths.

For example:

MYTH: Smart people are forgetful.

FACT: They're no more forgetful than people with average intelligence in the things that matter to them.

MYTH: Intelligence has little to do with how fast we absorb information.

FACT: Many psychologists believe that the faster you absorb things, the smarter you are.

In one study at the University of Edinburgh in Scotland, a series of pictures was rapidly flashed in front of test subjects, each picture showing two lines of unequal length.

Researchers found that the subjects with higher IQs were best able to quickly perceive which lines were shorter in each picture.

SUPER BRAIN: Albert Einstein

MYTH: People with high IQs are hard to get along with.

FACT: Study after study shows they're just as popular as other people — they're less neurotic and well-adapted to society.

MYTH: People with low IQs cannot learn.

FACT: Even severely retarded people with IQs in the low 40s are capable of learning new things and can be taught how to function in today's world.

SHOCKING PROOF OF LIFE AFTER DEATH!

Coma boy's spirit

MISSAMILIANO Volpato, 12, lapsed into a three-month coma after he was struck by a car.

COMA BOY met his late grandparents, shown left, in Heaven.

You have the right to 'flip the bird' at cops in Kentucky!

When driving through Kentucky it's your constitutional right to "flip the bird" at a law enforcement officer.

That's the opinion of a circuit court judge in Morehead who recently ruled that a forestry officer had no right to stop 22-year-old Robert H. McKenzie merely because his passenger made an obscene gesture with his finger.

The judge maintained the gesture was a form of free speech, protected by the U.S. Constitution. As a result, the judge dismissed other charges involving alcohol and marijuana lodged against the driver, unless an appeal is filed.

visits dead relatives in Heaven

12-yr.-old awakens and tells stunned father: 'I've been to Paradise!'

By SUSAN JIMISON
Staff writer

For three long months, Missamiliano Volpato lay in a deep coma in a hospital bed — while his spirit was in Heaven visiting with dead relatives!

And incredibly, when the 12-year-old boy awakened from his comatose state, he knew details about the lives of relatives who died before he was born, including a favorite song of his grandmother's he had never heard before.

"I went to Heaven and it's a beautiful place," the Istrana, Italy, child told his father Luciano Volpato when he came out of his coma.

"It was full of sunshine and music and I wanted to stay there.

"But they told me to go back to the other world because my mama and papa were waiting for me. I did what they told me to do."

Psychologist Victor Milani has spoken to the boy and is convinced that he did go to Heaven. "He never even met his grandparents but he correctly stated that his grandfather walked with a slight limp and had a habit of tugging on his ear when he talked.

"He also described an unusual birthmark that his grandmother had on her arm.

"I have spoken with the boy's father about this and I am convinced that he could not possibly have known these things unless he had, in fact, met his dead grandparents up in Heaven."

Missamiliano was critically hurt when he was struck by a car while riding his bicycle. He lapsed into a coma when he arrived at the hospital and doctors held out little hope for him.

But day after day, week after week, the boy survived and his parents began to believe he might make it.

They prayed for their son and their prayers were answered — by loved ones in Heaven who sent the child home.

One morning while Luciano sat at his son's bedside, brown-haired Missamiliano regained consciousness.

"I have been in a strange place, daddy," the boy said. "It was Paradise and I met people who told me they have been dead for a long time. I was very happy there and I felt real good.

"It was always light there and I heard the sweetest music that followed me wherever I went. I met grandpa and grandma there.

"They were just like the picture we have at home."

Missamiliano spoke in glowing terms of his visit with his grandparents — of the games they played with him, the songs they sang. He had learned by heart a favorite song of his grandmother's, a little lullaby in her native Neapolitan dialect which Missamiliano had never heard.

"I remember my mother singing the lullaby to me when I was a baby," said Luciano. "I never sang it for Missamiliano, yet he knew it word for word after he came back from his coma.

"Something happened in those three months he was unconscious — something that proves to me there's a life after death. My son was with my dead parents for a long, long time. I'm sure he met them in Heaven and that they sent him back for my sake."
